

China's International Relations

PLSC 132 / 686 / GLBL 379 | Fall 2014 | W 9:25-11:15 A.M. RKZ 102

Professor Jessica Chen Weiss

Office Hours W 1:15-2:15 P.M. or by appointment | RKZ 335

Course Overview

This course is a graduate and advanced undergraduate-level seminar on China's international relations. It seeks to put China's contemporary diplomacy and foreign relations in dialogue with mainstream ideas and arguments in international relations. The course is not a survey of Chinese foreign policy but instead challenges students to think deeply and critically about China's growing influence and its relations with foreign leaders and peoples. Analytic topics will include power transitions, deterrence and reassurance, nationalism and sovereignty, domestic constraints, political leadership, perceptions and misperceptions, soft power and public diplomacy, and regional balancing and alliances. Each week will include applications to current events and debates in Chinese foreign policy, including China's activities in the South China Sea, the U.S. "pivot" to Asia, relations with Japan, Vietnam, and the Philippines, crises in U.S.-China relations, such as the 1999 bombing of the Chinese Embassy in Belgrade, the 2008 Beijing Olympics, and the so-called "China model."

Readings

Most course readings are available online (use the hyperlinks in the electronic version of this syllabus) or via the Resources tab of the classes*v2 website. The following book is available for purchase at the Yale University bookstore (also on Kindle at Amazon):

- Jessica Chen Weiss, Powerful Patriots: Nationalist Protest in China's Foreign Relations (New York: Oxford University Press, 2014).

No prior coursework on China is required, but students should be prepared to fill in any gaps in background knowledge by consulting other references, such as the following (supplementary, not required) books:

- ❖ Jeffrey Wasserstrom. China in the 21st Century: What Everyone Needs to Know. Oxford University Press, 2010.
- ❖ Kenneth Lieberthal. Governing China: From Revolution to Reform. W.W. Norton, 2003.

Requirements

1. Written assignments (60%)

Three discussion papers (20% each) of between 1000 and 1200 words (approx. 4 pages) that incorporate and discuss at least four assigned readings and three additional short news pieces or policy commentary (six for graduate students) from sources such as NYT, WP, FT,

Good response papers will provide: 1) clarity on difficult questions and debates by identifying competing viewpoints and points of agreement and disagreement; 2) critical analysis of commonly used phrases and sound bites, unpacking concepts and identifying tensions or challenges to implementing concepts in specific cases. Students wishing to write essays that culminate in a normative conclusion, opinion, or policy recommendation are welcome to do so. However, such conclusions should not comprise more than a third of the total essay.

Response papers are due before the start of class. At least one paper must be submitted by week 6 (October 3). Students submitting response papers will speak for no more than 5 minutes, presenting the main points of their paper. Before class, students will upload their response papers and copies of additional news pieces to classes*v2 forum for the class to read and comment during the following week.

In addition to in-class discussion, the quality and quantity of each student's comments and posts to the classes*v2 forum will count toward the final course grade.

2. In-class participation (20%)
3. Comments posted to classes*v2 forum and feedback on other students' papers (20%)
